RAISING MORE BEEF CATTLE

It is a fact that there are thousands of new breeding herds being established all over the country. It is also a fact that farmers and small ranchmen are doing more care in selecting the heifers and cows for these new herds and the additions they are making to the herds they already have on their farms. Better quality has been preached from every hilltop in the land.

The live stock journals and agricultural papers have not let up in their advocacy of pure-bred cattle for the beef herds, and the voice has been heeded.

GRUBS INJURIOUS TO STOCK

Pests Found on Backs of Cattle Develop into Hool Flies and Do Great Harm to Animals.

The characteristic lumps or swellings which may be found under the skin on the backs of many cattle from January to April contain grubs. If these grubs are allowed to remain, they will complete their growth, drop to the ground and transform to heel flies, which may reinfect the cattle during the spring and summer. The grubs weaken the cattle, cause them to fall off in flesh and milk, and decrease the value of the hide. The beef in the immediate vicinity of a grub becomes slimy and of agreeable color, and is known to the butcher as "licked beef." On an average the damage to the hides is placed at one-third their value and the loss of beef to each infected animal ranges from $3.00 to $5.00.

ARRANGING RATION FOR COWS

Three Things Should Be Borne in Mind—Protein, a Little Fat and to Supply Succulence.

The ration for the dry cow should be formulated with three things in mind, namely, to furnish a sufficient amount of protein to develop the fetus properly and allow a surplus for the needs of the body of the cow; to supply enough carbohydrates that the cow may lay on a little fat; and to supply succulence. Some kind of green feed is very essential in the ration for the cow at all times. It serves the purpose of maintaining the bowels in a loose condition, which is necessary to good digestion and assimilation of food.
